Virtual concerts like this illustrate the unique and adaptive character of Santa Barbara's only full-power FM community-radio station. This past year the staff at KCSB has worked hard to continuously supply our community with all relevant news, which 2020 supplied plenty of, and fresh, freeform musical content. At the same time we've continued to practice our tradition of making some pretty amazing concerts happen! Yes, most people miss live in-person music experiences, but as the pandemic lingers on we have found a special place in our hearts for virtual shows here at KCSB.

Indigo de Souza writes and produces an extremely eclectic array of music, ranging from indie-rock to neo-soul and bedroom pop. These interweaving genres support lyrics depicting the emotional experience of a young woman of color growing up in rural North Carolina. If you listen to her side project Icky Brickett after you listen to her most popular release, I Love My Mom, you'll see just how genreless Indigo de Souza truly is. She first gained popularity after I Love My Mom was self-released the summer of 2018. Its reputation caught due to its eloquent soft punk instrumentals that are well-matched to emotive and passionate lyrics:

About KCSB-FM: Non-commercial community radio KCSB offers sounds and perspectives from the Tri-Counties and free year-round training to individuals and groups without other access to media resources. Both student and non-student volunteers learn to produce music, news, sports, cultural arts, and public affairs content airing 24/7/365 at 91.9 FM and online at kcsb.org. Most shows are produced locally, but KCSB hosts national and international programs too. KCSB is financed solely by self-assessed student fees, as part of Associated Students at the University of California, Santa Barbara (UCSB), and listener donations, and receives no State money from the University.

KCSB's special events — which include live musical performances, open mics, lectures, town forums, and film screenings — bring home the diversity and global reach of our radio programming's musical genres, along with the artistic, subcultural, intellectual, and demographic excellence of this University of California campus and the greater communities of which we are a part.
